

In Her Words

A play written and devised by Beth Blatt

Directed by Zachary Moore and Produced by Holly Rosen Fink

About the Art:

Rebirth

By Amarjit Dass

Writes Dass, "I don't view refugees as victims. Instead, I see them as warriors. A refugee woman is strong, courageous and has integrity. She is the queen of her own journey and brings beautiful ancestral energy to guide her wherever she goes. The butterflies are her spirits and ancestors. They guide and protect her and also remind her to keep moving forward in life because she is experiencing powerful transformation. There is a spiritual rebirth in her and she brings a glowing presence that captures the attention of everyone else. She is a queen and also a mother of this planet, her offspring and her identity."

A Message from the Playwright, Beth Blatt

Thank you for joining us for the Zoom reading of "In Her Words." For some of you, this will be your first Zoom presentation, and/or your first play "reading." Here are a few observations that will enhance your experience.

- The actors had only four hours rehearsal - and none of it in the same room! Please send them lots of love. Especially to Amina, who plays herself. She takes on her acting debut (in a foreign language, English) and publicly reliving her story. Brave woman.
- Bring your imagination. In a theatre, there would be costumes, lights, movement, and music to help you track how the women travel from country to country, when they play characters in each other's stories, when they are their "actor" selves. So you may be confused from time to time. It goes with the Zoom territory.
- Zoom has technical limitations, notably time lags that can slow down the action. Patience is encouraged.
- The play is "in process." There is more development to come, once we can get into a rehearsal room and a theater. Hopefully soon?

Caveats offered – enjoy the play!

About Neighbors for Refugees:

Neighbors for Refugees (NFR) is a 501(c)(3) Westchester-based, volunteer-run, non-profit resettlement organization. NFR advocates for the rights of refugees everywhere and works directly with refugee families to provide them with the necessary services, resources, and community support to bolster their resilience, achieve self-sufficiency and thrive in their new homes.

As volunteers, we accompany our new neighbors to empower them throughout their first year of transition as they reach self-sufficiency. We provide services such as setting up an apartment before their arrival, orienting them to their new community, getting children in school and adults into ESL classes, assisting in locating jobs or building a business, and supporting them in navigating a new culture and language.
